"WANTS"
1) assist individuals in monitoring their own health conditions, such as heart disease, diabetes, pregnancy, mental health, and more
2) allow healthcare providers to share and report on a patient's personal health records remotely
3) help keep track of medications.

Awareness:
Your mood, pain, and energy levels are all things that affect many aspects of your daily life. Keeping track of these on a regular basis is a great way to be more aware of your feelings and understand why you may be reacting a certain way or feeling stressed

The key to the success of any fitness app development is optimizing users' engagement and motivation. It's also great to keep looking at newer technology trends and change in users' habits to capture them into features of fitness apps
